Titcomb Academy Burned. SELGRADE, June 8.—The building known as Titcomb Academy was destroyed by fire, Saturday night. The fire was discovered about 12 o'clock by a young man who was driving by at that time. He aroused the neighbor, but too late to save the bailding. Titcomb Academy was situated on Belgrade Hill and years ago was a flourishing institution and many noted men received a part of their early education within its walls. Among them may be mentioned Auson Pond, Lot M. Morrill and ex-Gov. Austin of Minnesota. Since the war the building has been used for a free High school. The building has not been used for several weeks and the fire is supposed to be the work of tramps. The building was of brick and was worth about $800. No insur-

Under an arrangement with interested parties, the South Keene Chair Company will continue to operate its works temporarily, and without doubt at the meeting of the creditors next Thursday, an agreement will be effected to continue the operation of the works until the stock on hand is exhausted, and thereby avoid throwing fifty hands out of employment. Several of the largest creditors have suggested that an assignment be made by all the creditors, of the assets into the hands of one or more trustees, and time given the ex-governor to dispose of the same without sacrifice, believing that a sufficient sum would be realized to pay his indebtedness in full and leave quite a surplus for Mr. Hale.

Hundreds of Families in West Virginia Starving. Wherling, W. Va., June 8.—The situation in Jackson county is becoming quite serious. Hundreds of families are on the verge of starvation, and unless aid is spe dily extended by the remainder of the State or the outside world, the most disastrous results may be ex-pected. Some of the more fortunate and in-fluential people of the county, and others who believed the condition of the inhabitants exaggerated, have heretofore denied the reports from time to time made public, hoping that things could be tided over till a new crop could be raised; but now much alarm prevails, and public meetings are being held in all the vilpeals for aid. He knew men who had gone for five days without food, and he himself would soon be a sufferer. J. H. Garrett said his neighbors were actually starving. John Smith, county assessor, said that to his knowledge 30 families were in dan, er of starving at New Kentuck. An appeal for aid was signed by the representatives of 100 families. Spaniards Fleeing in Terror from

by Clark. Archbishop Tache Thinks No Effort

Winnipeg, Man., June 8.—Gabriel Dumont, in an interview at Benton, Montana, blames Lawrence Clark for precipitating the rebellion. He says that he only had 26 men at Duck Lake, four of whom were killed. He declares that Crosier fired first. Gabriel got a severe scalp wound in this fight. At Fish Oreck his force was 47 men. With these he successfully withstood Middleton and his 603. Four half-breads were killed in this fight. At Batouche they got out of ammunition for their Winchesters, or they could have gained a victory there. Riel was in none of the fights. Damont says that Riel acted with courage, and that not a single man was killed by Middleton's cannon or Gatling gan. They shet too high. He has a poor opinion of Middleton's men as fighters. Mrs. Deleny and Mrs. Gowanlock, with several friendly half-breeds, were brought into camp at Fort Pitt to day by a party of scouts, who overtook them traveling towards Trottle lake. They escaped from Big Bear Monday, and were making a detour to get to Fort Pitt. The ladies say that they have been protected by the half-breeds all along, and have suffered no hardships except from constant travel. McLean and the other prisoners are still with the Indians moving toward Lone Lake. Fury, West and Fisk, who were wounded in Wednesday's fight between Steele and the Indians, were brought to Fort Pitt to-day. A detachment sent out under Major Hughes returned there to-day. It has been decided to use only mounted men for the pursuit of the enemy. The Gatling guns will go along.

A SECOND ATTACK. The Capstone of the Washington Monument Shuttered by Lightning. Washington, June 8.—The Washington monument was struck by lightning during the thunder storm Friday. The noise was so termonument was struck by lightning during the thunder storm Friday. The noise was so terrific that the circumstance was promptly reported to Colonel Thomas L. Casey of the Army Engineer Corps, who superintended the construction and completion of the monument. The monument having been stripped of every vestige of staging, the only way to examine the exterior of the structure was to train a powerful telescope on the pyramidal crown, which is 500 feet from the base and has a height of 50 feet in twelve courses of marble, not including the capatone. The telescopic examination showed that the capatone had been shattered at the northwest point of its base, remaying a piece of the marble probably four inches in height and thickness in the shape of a pyramid. The last course of stone, which is only seven inches in thickness, showed on the north side a distinct vertical crack beginning at the shattered part of the capatone and extending 4 feet 4 inches, the width of that stone. Through the telescope it was determined that the fracture was less than an inch in width, widening very little toward the bottom, to that the riven part projected over the next course on the east side half an inch, and on the north side three-fourths of an inch. Standing near the base of the monument, no fracture or damage can be discovered by the naked eye. Nor could any other injury be found by the telescopic examination exteriorly save what has been described.

After this examination, Colonel Casey made a careful examination of the interior of the roof, and found it as perfect as when completed last December. Not the slightest evidence of the lightning's shock had manifested itself within the monument. At the point where the electricity had exteriorly shown its power there was inside within four inches of the fracture no sign of the displacement of even a particle of cement.

London, 8.—In the Commons today Childers had no sooner done explaining the government reason for not at present refunding the tax on beer and spirits than Sir Michael Edward Hicks Beach (Conservative) esked why it was that a liberal government which ought to be economical had to resort to extreme forms of taxation in order to meet the extraordinary expenditure of £100,000,000? (Cheers from Tory benches) Sir Michael denounced the increased duty on spirits, and he concluded by moving that the proposed increase in the duty on spirits and beer was iniquitable in absence of a corresponding addition to the duties on wine.

Manager Winship and Mr. Baiggs are expected to-day. It is hoped that Hilsey will come with them but he has made no agreement with the association and is free to do as he pleases. The report that several players had been secured is incorrect. They are in negotiation with the association but have not been secured.

Piggott has been fined $25 and surpended without pay for his poor playing on Saturday. It was supposed yesterday and reported that Pope had been similarly punished but the directors deny that such action was taken in regard to him. If Watson is to suffer as he certainly deserves to do, Pope, who played as poorly, should receive his desserts. The action of the management gives an impression of favoritism which can be but injurious to the club. NOTES.

National Encampment. The Governor of Michigan has accepted the invitation extended to be present, in the following letter:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, MICHIGAN, LANSING, June 5, 1825.

Sir—I have the honor to acknowledge on behalf of Governor Alger, the receipt of the complimentary invitation to be present at the parade, reception and reunion of the National Encampment of the G. A. R. on the 23d inst.

The governor and his entire staff leave Michigan by special cars on the 18th and barring accident, will be at Portland on Sunday morning. It may be of interest to know the Governor and his staff are all members of the Grand Army of the Republic and that every man bears honorable scars received in battle in the war for the Union.

I think Michigan will turn out a very large contingent for the Encampment and we are coming bent on enjoying the occasion.

Respectfully, GRO. R. OSMAN.

To the Editor of the Press: It would appear from an item in your Saturday's issue that the committee of the City Council has but just now obtained permission from the harbor commissioners to put into execution the plan last adopted for the disposal of the sewage from the northern slope of our city; and, consequently, it is not too late to enter an objection to the whole project.

sewerage of this large section of our territory would present many items of curious interest; but I desire at this time to call attention to a few only. Last summer the council, adopting the wise advice of a committee of citizens, employed a competent sanitary engineer to make a survey and report as to the best method of dispening of the newage. The system which Mr. Shedd advised was admitted by the city engineer to be the best proposed, but it was not adopted. Instead of it, a plan was chosen which would give us a sewer incapable, at the best, of doing the work reasonably to be expected of so costly a contrivance, and, in the opinion of some who have made a special study of such affairs, almost certain to aggravate the evils it was designed to remove. These points were clearly made and sustained by Mr. Edward C. Jordan in an admirable letter published in the daily papers last March,-a communication which received nothing like the attention to which its merits and the importance of the subject entitled it. The sewer was begun; but, early in May, an alternative project was made public, namely, the digging of ditches in the flats to carry the sewage to the main channel of the cove. By this system the liquids from the sewers are supposed to the main channel of the cove. By this system the liquids from the sewers are supposed to find their way to the ocean; but no account seems to have been taken of the incoming tide or of the peculiar conformation of the basin. It appears to have been taken for granted that the force of the discharges from the sewers will be sufficient to overcome that of the rising it ide, and that the filth held in suspension in the sewage will not rise to the surface, and be carried back to the shores, when the tide meets it, but will accommodatingly keep in the open channels dug for it. I believe that the hopes which are entertained in this connection are doomed to be blasted. The plan is practically worthless, in one respect worse than that, because its execution will give the people a take sense of security, and serve to divert attention for some time from one of the most serious defects in our sanitary arrangements.

All this, however, is in the domain not of conjecture, but of fact; and the object of this communication is not to discurs in detail the demerits of the method, but to call the attention of the citizens of Portland to the manner in which $17,000 of their, money is about to be wasted on the flats of Back Cove. It cannot be said consistently by the City Council that it is too late to change the plan; for its sudden abandonment of its readiness to entertain and adopt new views. If the citizens will investigate the matter, and give expression to their views, it is possible that the city government may yet be persuaded that the best way out of the difficulty is to employ as arbiter another specialist in sanitary engineering, get his opinion on all the plans proposed,—Mr. Shedd's high level and low-level sewers, Mr. Goodwin's tidal sewer, and the trenches,—and follow his advice. This style of procedure would be in accordance with universally recognized business principles, and would undoubtedly be adopted, if people could be made to understand that human life has a distinct money value, and that neglect of sanitary r selves with a system of sewage disposal which has nothing to commend it but its primary cheapness.

If anything is to be done to prevent this contemplated waste, it must be done quickly; and tax-payers who feel an interest in the matter should appear at the contemplation of the co

Mr. Charles A. Dana relates the following reminiscence of Andrew Johnson, whom he met in a hotel in Richmond, immediately met in a hotel in Richmond, immediately after the Union troops had entered the city. On shaking hands, Mr. Johnson began to express his views concerning the necessity of severe punishment for the chiefs of the Confederacy. To which Mr. Dana replied: "Why urge these opinions upon me? Mr. Lincoln will be here this morning or tomorrow, and he has the decision of the question." "I know that," rejoined Mr. Johnson, "but the subject is of such moment, and it is so necessary that an example should be made that I wish to argue the question be made that I wish to argue the question with every gentleman I meet.' Being an expert bicyclist, he stole a machine from a expert bicyclist, he stole a machine from a gentleman who resides on Eighteenth Street near M, and started for home over the near-est turnpike. Before leaving he wrote a note to the owner of the bicycle, stating that he has borrowed it and would return the machine in good order by express. "I would rather hoe cornhills in West Virginia at twenty-five cents per day than wair at twenty-five cents per day than wait around Washington for a Cabinet place," said the note in conclusion.
